Good News From The Weekend Katherine Osborne, Chad Redden

This book is full of pines and good news. The pines are full of good news, and the good news is full of pines. Not just regular good news, it is good news from the weekend. And the good news from the weekend is also full of good news from Doug the helicopter pilot. There is good news from the Rule Books for Rule books. If you were wondering, the Village Witch and the Village Mayor have good news too. The weather reporters, the red smoke rising in the south, and even the carvings in the pine bark are full of good news. And if you didn't think there could be good news on the shore of the Man made lake, then you will be pleasantly surprised. Even the out of focus side of the mountain has good news. As well as the Guilty Air Moon, the sculpture dedicated to searching, and Emily the bat, who is very full of good news. Where there is smoke at the Rachel made lake there is good news. Where there is a fishing competition there is good news. At the pollination workshop? Yes, there is good news. From the letter carrier? Of course. It is inside of the Rule Book for Fireflies and under the Abandoned Shopping Mall Moon. The ferret's dream is a good news dream. Good news can be found at the Cub Club! recreational zone, sleeping inside the sleeping bag, floating in the Gary made lake, and even when the vision quest pauses for a snack break. And a catfish from Raleigh and a still life painter have something in common and that is good news. Even the practice of lightning and the wolf workshop and the Breath Holding Moon have good news. The gopher from Bowling Green has good news. So do the wolf with a pine cone in his mouth and the drunken blue heron and the raccoon from Akron. The Village Sheriff will certainly share good news with you. So will the crow from Muncie and the Night Accountant. And when you find the finger in the mud, you will find good news. It sits with the vultures who boil instant noodles. It is in the pages of the Rule Book for Bears. It is in the light of the Heirloom Hairbrush Moon. You can rent a canoe full of good news at the canoe rental shack. Don't forget to pick up the Rule Book for Cranes or the Rule Book for the Village Witch so you can find more good news. The teens? Oh yes, very full of good news. Down the well? Yes. Deep inside the Cavern of Last Birthdays? Of course! Look up to the Empty Jar Moon, or the equally sad clouds, the adjacent sky, the sunset, or the bulletin board if you want to see more good news. And where there is a migration or a night racket, then there is good news as well. Good news is in the smell that radiates from the Blackwoods. Creates the light moving across the treeline. Rings in the payphone. Gurgles in the Andy made creek. Burns at Trash Burning Rock. Sharpens the knife side of the mountain. Moths around the Porch Light moon. The buffalo in the middle of the road will be sure to share good news with you. The rabbit will tell you about a dream full of good news. When the snowstorm arrives, it brings good news. It fills up both the cabin fever and the Rule Book for Moths. Good news is also inside the light of the lanterns across the creek, the Vanishing Kindness Moon, the ice river, and the shivering and crying squirrel. And when thinking about good news you will of course find more good news. It is even under the ice of the frozen Stanley made pond. Burns in the Cabin Fire Moon. Tunnels beneath the pines. Inspires the Village Arsonist. Good news is a religious experience. Good news gives the woodpecker from Fort Worth purpose. Leads the funeral procession. Squirms under the Muddy Knees Moon and hides in the abandoned barn. It drinks on the rooftop and wakes up with stray teens who wake up in clover. Good news happens on an alternative Earth. It appears as the Sun and comes back at night with the Secret Blooming Moon. Good news floats on thermals above Skull Bone Prairie. Fills the Fragile Ribs Moon. Burns everything up with a forest fire. Then comes back for another weekend.
