"Glory, glory, bless the Lord!" shouted Billy as he stood on the foundation stone of the chapel he was building for the Lord. He preached his first sermon there on that stone. God provided the funds for that chapel just in time for each need. Billy was overjoyed when he was given enough money for lumber, but he had no way of hauling the boards. A kind neighbor said, "I have a house and a cart, but my horse is so stubborn. You can surely try my horse, but you won't get her to pull a load, I warn you." "I never saw a better mare," Billy told the owner when he returned the house." —From The Horse That Worked for God. Many other stories like this fill this book, making for wholesome reading by adolescents and whole families.
