These two western romance stories total over 13,300 words and they include one novella and one short story. A Little Humility Brings Great Love, is a romantic western love story about a well established pastor who seeks companionship and love from a good woman, who he hopes will love him back and he can make his wife. What arrived on the coach, sent by his aunt, is far different from that. She is stuck-up, an orphan, looks after her ten-year old brother, and wants to take the pastor for every dollar she can. Through perseverance and love, and the bible, the pastor is able to turn all of their lives around. The Western Mail Order Bride: Love & Silver In Marlboro Valley, is a short story of over 4,000 words set in a new silver mining town in Colorado, in 1871. Men outnumber women ten to one and a rancher, Brigham Whitestar, seeks a mail order bride. At the same time a former young outlaw, Cody Johnson, also wishes for a bride. They arrive at the mail order bride offices in town at exactly the same time and wait for their brides a couple of months later on the train platform. The trouble is, only the woman intended for Brig arrives. An intense rivalry starts from then on as both men vie for the affections of Greta Stein, the European woman who is cultured, speaks three languages, and knows how to ride race horses.
