As human beings we cannot see the face of God and live—and yet we catch glimpses of the Divine in the world around us, in countless living metaphors, including the winged and feathered creatures. Around the world, across the centuries, birds have stirred the human imagination. They have inspired us and comforted us. They have made us believe in miracles and mystery. This book, full of quotes from ancient and modern writers, as well as images and the author's original insights, reveals the Divine through the sacred metaphors of birds and wings.
