A High Country Tale: The Tride&True and Stickshift Sagas Zachariah Jack

A High Country Tale... Luke Cevennes, M.D. He liked the way it sounded even after a decade and a half of wearing the mantle. Jeremy Kell, Ph.D. That rolled over Luke's tongue with more flavor than any name in his world. The sexy Jamaican immigrant literally swept him off his feet nearly two decades before. The two fit each other. Luke and Jeremy's best friends, Jake and Calumet, likewise professional and accomplished, lagged in years by a decade but the bond between the four: as deep as the Marianas Trench. Traversing the 21st century as a new age American family, the two interracial couples complemented each other in ways the majority of people could only look upon in wishing. Hijinks, ribaldry, a touch of activism plus candor and humor, all souffled with a smattering of profundity, gel into a roving epic. From America to Europe to the Caribbean, on the shores of WWII Normandy, to Blue Mountain in Jamaica, up the wuthering heights of the Rockies, and down the alluvial plains of the American deep south these self-deprecating, refined yet lusty menfolk wend their way, together, luring the flotsam, jetsam and A-listers of Humanity along, on the sojourn that is their Tree of Life. Meet four men of alternative lifestyle. Sexy, secure, seductive, selective, urbane, provocative. Existential, extant, erudite, educated...ecdemolagniac. The jungle fever couples thrust themselves onto the new American scene, ready to project and proclaim themselves. Whether bidden or not.
