Genesis (GODS CHAIN) (Volume 1) Nikolaus Baker

Genesis: GODS CHAIN In the beginning came the dreams... For centuries the wicked weaved their intricate webs of deceit, disguising another pathway to find God. There is an ancient quest that continues for a hidden knowledge that brings power, corruption and death in a dark tale that originates in the remote Scottish village of Mauchline. In Vatican City another mystery surrounds an untraceable security breach in the computerised nerve-centre of papal authority. This has ramifications for the suspect intentions of “Gods Own Banker” Cardinal Giovanni Dalla Gassa. He has plans for a “new Genesis”. Once he is in possession of the links to God that would tip the cosmic and spiritual balance in favour of the holder. The mystery thickens with the involvement of the Freemasons, the Cardinals' security agents from the Vatican Internal Audit Office, a ruthless businessman with Mafia connections named Don Luizio Ilario, the disappearance of a Computer Systems Administrator, Michaelangelo and the torment of his meddling friend Francesca DeRose who becomes lost inside the Vatican Catacombs! This story is intricate and complex, akin to a game of chess with deadly manipulation. Behind the Vatican walls is a top secret and highly classified dossier sealed with a Papal Golden Bull called Operation Aequinoxium. What vital information does it hold? Meanwhile, back in Mauchline, new and increasingly bizarre events are only starting to unfold. Where will its macabre secrets lead? Unravel this covert cover-up in a sinister story which tells of the beginning of the end of all civilizations and a dawning of a new and ominous superpower! Is this really a holy mission to find God or is it a supernatural grail quest to the grave... It is a new beginning... A new Genesis... Excerpt : The blackness seemed to get blacker - to close in around her. Her view was diminishing rapidly, almost as if the headlamp was losing power. What would she do, without her light amidst all these bones? ‘Do not look down there, Francesca! Don’t look any more! Keep walking! Please God help me!’ Francesca pleaded to God in utter despair, completely terrified. Lost and alone she needed all the help she could get. The darkness was heavy and the corridor was long, so long. Francesca began to slow down her pace and eventually ground to a halt. The cold was so intense that crystals were thickening on top of her body as she moved less and less. Far away, the stairs again came into her cold beam of light. It was her way out! The frost permeated into every muscle and sinew. Francesca walked and slipped towards the end of the dormitory of the dead, her mind slowing in pace along with her limbs, although she still had enough wit to check for her markings. Survival was instinctive - another mistake would prove fatal. No sign! Francesca stumbled onto the first three or four steps, feeling weary and exhausted, her body completely frozen. Her plight was desperate and this would have been the finish for most people, but somehow Francesca was given one final boost. ‘Come on girl, move it! Come on, get up! Lift yourself now! Up!’ She screamed loudly, a surge of adrenaline instantly injecting throughout her body. Her heart began pumping strongly enough...and Francesca started crawling up the stairs two and three at a time. Francesca eventually reached the top. She had made it! Her teeth chattered uncontrollably and her body shook, completely frozen and covered totally with white frost. Francesca’s hair was stiff and her face white - she came to rest, lying on the cold floor, resembling a thin snowman on a white field. The girl lay down atop the frosty hall and fell asleep, her body shattered from overuse. As she lay, the frost began to melt from her shoulders and hair; her cold white skin and blue complexion thawed, and a blush started to flow in her cheeks as she remained still, slouched and unconscious to the sound of someone or something screaming from below....
